rominent Kentuckians Settle Their Differences in a Tragic Manner—Colonel A. M. Swope Killed by Colonel Cassius Goodloe—The Latter Shot, but may Re-afternoon William Cassius Goodloo stabbed and killed Armstead M. Swope n the corridor of the Government buildng. Swope fired twice at Goodloe, one of the shots taking effect, and it is thought Goodloe can not possibly live. Goodloe and Swope were getting their mails when the affair occurred. When first noticed by an eye-witness they were both in a stooping posture near their boxes. Suddenly they rose to their feet and literally glared at each other with hatred born of years of antipathy. One of them said, it could not be dis-tinguishes which, "You spoke to me; you insulted me." This was followed by a volley of angry words. Nobody knows exactly what was said at that time, but both men must have given utterance to bitter denunciation of each other. According to the best accounts that can be procured, both men, at this pritical moment, drew weapons, Swope's was a revolver, Goodloe's a hunting night her face was roseate and her knife of the variety that, once opened, can not be closed, save by releasing the spring that holds it open. Both rushed at each other. Swope fired and Goodloe stabbed him in the breast. It was a well-nigh fatal thrust, and the wounded man gasped, staggered backwards toward the door of the money order office, at the same time uttering loud ejaculations, whether of pain, terror or rage, has never been determined. Goodloe followed him vengefully and planted blow after blow upon his opponent's breast and back, until twelve more had been added to the first flerce thrust. Goodloe Dead and Swope in His Grave.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 9.-Yesterday A Locket in Colonel Goodloe's Pocket the Cause of His Mortal Wound.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 11 .- A newly filled grave in Stanford; a scarcely cold corpse in Lexington. Such is the result of Friday's tragedy. Colonel Goodloe died at nearly high noon yesterday. The body of his victim and his slaver had but a few minutes before been cov ered with its mother earth. A feeble old father in Stanford has had his few remaining days on earth shortened by an overpowering grief; one of the happiest families in Lexington has lost its head, and a widow bowed down with wee in anguish draws her fatherless offspring to her breast. A brief history of Colonel Goodloe's case is as follows: There were no symptoms of the piercing of the abdominal cavity, and the piercing of the intestines until about twenty-two hours after the wound was received. The patient rested well, felt no pain, and was perfectly composed. He said to the doctors, however, that he was satisfied the intestines had been pierced, but they argued that as there was no symptoms of such a thing having been done, it would better not to subject him to a serious surgical operation without first knowing such an operation was necessary. Owing to this fact no operation was performed until symptoms indicating Colonel Goodloe was right in his conjectures were made manifest That was between 11 and 12 o'clock Saturday morning. Then it was the operation was decided on, and for two hours in the afternoon the patient was under the knife. He rallied wonderfully and held his own until 2 o'clock yesterday morning, at which time he awoke from rather a refreshing sleep and partook of nourishment. 5 however, began sinking, and his condition grew rapidly worse, and the doctors pronounced the case utterly hopeless. He lingered along through the morning hours, closely watched by the physicians. At 11 his pulse ceased beating, and at 12:55 he died painlessly, being conscious until within a very few minutes of death. The examination showed that the bullet from Swope's pistol had been deflected almost at right angles into the abdominal cavity, the obstruction deflecting the ball having been a locket in the right vest Colonel Swope's remains were pocket. interred at Stanford by the side of his mother. never more prosperous than now. The year has been full of blessing. We have had abundant harvests and an important and almost universal improvement in business. While calamities have fallen on others we have been spared. Our laws are respected and obeyed by a happy and contented people, who appreciate our institutions and government more than ever before, the future is bright with hope and promise and for all these blessings we are indebted to the goodness and mercy of God. It is therefore fit and appropriate that conforming to established usage and in compliance with the Proclamation of the President of the United States, we should make proper acknowledgment of the giver of all good. Therefore I, Joseph B. Foraker, Governor of the State of Ohio, do hereby designate and appoint Thursday, November 28, 1889, to be a day of Thanksgiving and praise, and I do hereby request all classes of citizens to suitably observe the same as such.

J. B. FORAKER.

Governor of Ohio. THE board of election of Steubenville. on the 8th, removed Ed Marion and S. M. Matlock, registrars, and James Mc-Cullough and Nimrod Teaff, judges of the ward polls, for refusing to return their registers at the prescribed time, and for refusing to accept the vote of a man whose name was ordered to be placed on the register by the board. Marion and McCullough are Demo crats and Matlock and Teaff are Republicans.
